

Abstract*Semiconductor Device

A semiconductor device comprising an n-channel region and a p-channel region formed on a common substrate, both channel regions having a source and a drain, the device further comprising a gate electrode common to both channel regions and spaced from the substrate by an area of non-polarising dielectric material arranged under the gate electrode.

Fig. 1